

Dear Reader:

Until now, we have asked very little from our community in terms of help. But now we do need help – in many areas, if our organization is to survive into the future. We ask you to give whatever help you now can, in terms of in-kind contributions and monetary gifts. If you know of others who may want to partner with us in advancing robust, explicit, ethical critical thinking across the planet, I would be happy to speak with those people to see how they may best help us.

We need help in many areas, including:

1. Fund raising – raising money through private donations, which can be made directly through our Donations page.
2. Grant writing – working with our partner schools and the Foundation for Critical Thinking in developing and writing grants through private foundations.
3. Web development – working with our team to develop the Critical Thinking Café™ – an interactive internet café with 3D possibilities, focused on advancing freedom of thought through freedom of speech using the tools of the critical mind (the disciplined mind). We need highly skilled web developers for this work.
4. Web editing – helping us keep our huge website properly edited as we continue to move forward using various digital platforms.
5. Videography – editing and preparing the large amount of raw footage we have of our presenters.
6. Anything else you may be able to help us with that is not on this list – please offer your suggestions for contributing to our work, given your expertise and interests...

If you can help us in any way to secure and advance the future of the Foundation for Critical Thinking, or if you know of others we can reach out to, please email me at: lindaelder@criticalthinking.org.

For whatever help you can offer, we are immensely grateful.

All Best,
