“...it is essential that we foster a new conception of self-identity, both individually and collectively, and a new practical sense of the value of self-disciplined, openminded thought. As long as we continue to feel threatened by those who think differently from us, we will listen seriously only to those who start from our premises, who validate our prejudices, and who end up with our conclusions.” — RICHARD PAUL, 1989

For 38 years, the Foundation for Critical Thinking has been working toward the advancement of critical societies. The Foundation is a non-profit organization in the U.S. that seeks to promote essential change in education and society through the cultivation of fairminded critical thinking--thinking which embodies intellectual empathy, intellectual humility, intellectual perseverance, intellectual integrity and intellectual responsibility. The FCT offers conferences, professional development, books, and thinker's guides on critical thinking. Visit the Foundation for Critical Thinking at: www.criticalthinking.org.
